

Tina Fey promises a politics-free GoldenGlobes

By Emily Smith

February 26, 2021 | 7:12pm

Tina Fey at the 2015 Golden Globes.
Getty Images

Get ready for a kinder, gentler Golden Globes now the king of cringe Ricky Gervais has retired his hosting role: Tina Fey says she and co-host Amy Poehler won't get political.

Fey told Jill Rappaport on her "Rappaport to the Rescue" podcast, "We just want to make it a fun hang out for people at home — kind of a stress reliever, so I don't think you can expect much politics at all. "

She added, "It doesn't seem like a venue for political jokes."

And when asked what she will wear for the big night, Fey reminisced about her last time co-hosting with Poehler in 2015, "It's been five years and the places we would go, Jill — couture houses, we would meet with the designers, there were muslins, mock-ups, and the jewels!

"Now it's ... like 'Nordstrom Rack, what do ya got?'"

