As a veterinary professional, when you can't read a journal and you can't watch a video, you can still learn and laugh about practice, thanks to podcasts. And dvm360.com will be highlighting new episodes of notable podcast series for veterinary consumption—for learning about medicine, improving your business savvy, trying out better self-care skills, sharing with pet owners or just decompressing after a long shift.

Wanna see what we'll be sharing with you on the reg?

General-purpose veterinary podcasts

Blunt Dissection and Freewheelin' Veterinary Business Q&A (hosted by Dave Nicol, BVMS, Cert. Mgmt MRCVS)

"Blunt Dissection is the podcast where the best minds in veterinary medicine, business, academia, not-for-profit and politics are profiled/deconstructed so you can learn the habits, routines, thought processes and anything else that makes these individuals so good at what they do." (Editor's note: "Freewheelin'" is a Q&A video show answering questions from viewers that's also available on audio.)
